Welcome from the local organisers...

Dear participants

Welcome to the fourth European Conference on Politics and Gender! We are very honoured and happy to be hosting this exciting event.

Gender and Politics is a prioritised and strong research area in the Department of Government at Uppsala University. We are therefore proud to be able to highlight it by hosting such a large number of scholars, panels, and papers that represent the very best work in the field of gender and politics. We will do our utmost to make this conference a memorable and intellectually stimulating occasion for all. We also hope you will participate in the social activities to strengthen existing networks and reunite with old friends – as well as to develop new networks and meet new people.

Our thanks to the Convenors, as well as to our own coordinator Pernilla Tunberger, for their hard work and cooperation. Have a stimulating meeting, and enjoy the old university town of Uppsala in summertime!

Helena Wockelberg
Head of Department of Government,
Uppsala University

Christina Bergqvist is Professor of political science. Her major areas of research are in the fields of gender and political representation, comparative feminist policy, gender equality and welfare state policies. She was editor-in-chief of Equal Democracies? Gender and Politics in the Nordic Countries, published by Scandinavian University Press in 1999. In recent years she has published articles in the Journal of European Social Policy and the International Feminist Journal of Politics.

Assistant Professor Elin Bjarnegård's research focuses in particular on gender; including the impact of parties, electorate, and networks on political recruitment, the role of informal institutions in politics, the explicit gendering of men and masculinities, gender equality policies, and attitudes to and dynamics of violence during conflict. She has published articles in many journals, and her book Gender, Informal Institutions and Political Recruitment was published by Palgrave in 2013.

The research of Assistant Professor Pär Zetterberg focuses on political recruitment and representation in a comparative perspective, mainly in Latin American countries. He is interested in the adoption of gender equality policies and, in particular, he examines the long-term possibilities for electoral gender quotas to break gender inequalities. He also conducts research into the ways educational institutions influence the development of young people's political beliefs, attitudes and behaviour.

Dear friends and colleagues

Welcome to the fourth ECPG! We are thrilled to be in the city of Uppsala where we have an exciting range of Panels and Papers with scholars from around the world in attendance.

These are important and uncertain times; debates concerning gender have become increasingly pertinent. Gender inequalities permeate cultural, economic and political institutions and are underpinned by powerful and pervasive societal norms. This conference addresses the ongoing global struggles for equality, liberty and justice.

The programme includes a plurality of theoretical and methodological approaches and reflects the diversity of the gender and politics field including: political science, international relations, sexuality studies, political theory and philosophy, public policy and public administration.

Our thanks go to the Section Chairs for helping put together such coherent and stimulating Panels; to Karen Celis and Johanna Kantola for organising the roundtable; to Louise Soper and Diane Towler of the ECPR for their assistance; and of course to the team in Uppsala for all their hard work in hosting this important conference. Best wishes,

Isabelle Engeli
University of Ottawa

Elizabeth Evans
University of Bristol

Liza Mügge
University of Amsterdam

Elizabeth Evans is a Lecturer in Politics at the University of Bristol, where she teaches courses on UK and US politics and where she has been involved in the establishment of the new gender research centre. Her research interests include gender and political representation, feminist activism and theory, and political parties and elections. Currently treasurer of the UK PSA's Women and Politics group, Liz's second book, The Politics of Third Wave Feminism, has just been published by Palgrave.

Isabelle Engeli is Associate Professor at the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, University of Ottawa. Her research specialises in comparative policy agendas, human biotechnology regulatory regimes, and the politics of gendering policy attention and action. She was co-recipient in 2012 of the Best Comparative Policy Paper Award from APSA Public Policy Section and the 2011 Carrie Chapman Catt Prize. Isabelle is taking up a Readership at the University of Bath in July 2015.

Liza Mügge is Assistant Professor in Gender & Ethnicity in the University of Amsterdam's political science department, and associate director of the Amsterdam Research Center for Gender and Sexuality. In 2014/15 she has a fellowship with the Women and Public Policy Program at Harvard Kennedy School. Beyond intersectionality and political representation, she is interested in the extension of anthropological methods, such as ethnography, and political science research.

Uppsala University

The oldest seat of higher learning in the Nordic countries, Uppsala University's 40,000 students enjoy a fantastic cultural environment and an enviable student life

Uppsala University is characterised by diversity and breadth, with international frontline research at nine faculties and limitless educational offerings at undergraduate and master levels. The education pursued here benefits society and business on a global level.

Department of Government

Researching and educating students for nearly 400 years, the Department offers a thriving and internationally successful research environment.

With 60 faculty members and 40 PhD students, it is recognised as one of the leading political science departments in the Nordic countries. Each year, the Department awards the prestigious Johan Skytte Prize in Political Science to an outstanding international scholar in the discipline.

The faculty covers all major fields of political science, with an objective to analyse the conditions for political power and the prerequisites for well-functioning democratic institutions.

Members are frequently turned to by the media for expert analysis, asked to serve in public commissions, and engage in wider society in a variety of ways. Many graduates have gone on to have successful careers in leading public and private sector positions.

The Department is situated around the historic Skytteanum building in the heart of the city, part of Uppsala University's Gamla torget or 'Old Square' Campus.

Gender and Politics Community

Research about gender and politics has grown strong and influential at the Department of Government in the past decade. It is now one of the largest and most vibrant subfields, involving around 15 researchers and doctoral students.

The gender and politics community has been successful in receiving grants and in publishing its work, and was picked as one of the most promising areas of research in a large evaluation of the Department.

Research centres around issues of gendered representation and public policy, with an empirical focus ranging from case studies of Sweden to global comparisons.

The city of Uppsala

Sweden's fourth-largest city, with a population of 200,000, Uppsala retains its small-town charm while offering a big city's selection of cultural treasures, shops and restaurants

Today, Uppsala is a dynamic industrial and commercial city. Only 30 minutes to Stockholm-Arlanda international airport and 40 minutes to Stockholm, Uppsala has become an attractive conference location.

Among Uppsala's most famous historical attractions are its cathedral, the largest in Scandinavia; Botaniska trädgården, one of Sweden's oldest botanical gardens; Theatrum Anatomicum in Gustavianum, a unique anatomical theatre built in the 1600s; the Linnaeus Garden; and Uppsala Castle (right), which dates from the mid 1500s.

Standing Group

Created in 1985, the Gender and Politics Group has over 750 members from all over the world

The Group is a broad-based network of people interested in issues relating to the study of gender and sexuality in politics and world politics.

It encourages workshops, panels and research groups with an emphasis on gender and seeks to increase the profile of women in political science.

Over the past twenty years, research conducted in this field has expanded significantly and the number of gender and politics scholars participating in the ECPR Joint Sessions and General Conferences has increased exponentially.

In 2007, the Group decided to arrange a conference dedicated to this exciting field of research. The first-ever European Conference on Politics and Gender (ECPG) was held in Belfast on 13 – 15 January 2009, and was an enormous success: more than 300 scholars converged for three days of panels, plenaries and socialising.

The aim at that time was to turn the new conference into a biennial international conference on gender and politics, and the Group's second conference was held in Budapest, 13 – 15 January 2011, with an even bigger number of participants in attendance.

The third ECPG Conference took place at the University Pompeu Fabra Barcelona, 21 – 23 March 2013. A tremendous success, the conference featured 100 panels with more than 500 papers.

In 2013, the Standing Group created a Geneva-based charity to manage the ECPG conferences.

Feminism and Political Science

Pioneering feminist political scientist Joni Lovenduski is Anniversary Professor of Politics at Birkbeck College, University of London. A Fellow of the British Academy and Academician of the Academy of Social Sciences, she chairs the board of Political Quarterly and is a board member of several other journals. In 2009 she won this Standing Group's Gender and Politics Career Achievement Award.

Joni's two main research interests are political representation and how it affects the quality of democracy, and UK and EU equality policy. She is also interested in political recruitment and candidate selection; sex equality policy; equality machinery; gendering public policy; and gendered ceremony and ritual in parliament.

Published work includes Feminizing Politics (2005), State Feminism and Political Representation (2005), The Hansard Report on Women at the Top (2005, with Sarah Childs and Rosie Campbell); Gender and Political Participation (2004, with Pippa Norris & Rosie Campbell); and Women and European Politics (1986).

Roundtable

Europe is Burning – and we are Talking about Intersectionality!

Sponsored by the Routledge Series on Gender and Comparative Politics, edited by Karen Celis & Isabelle Engeli

This roundtable will discuss the major political and societal transformations taking place in Europe today.

Themes range from the Ukrainian crisis to the economic, financial and political crises in the EU and its member states. The panel will also analyse the political responses to these crises in the form of the rise of the populist right and of conservatism across Europe, as well as counter-reactions to these phenomena.

We ask the provocative question about intersectionality to explore whether feminism as a form of activism, and feminist scholarship, are detached from what is going on in the real world or strongly engaged with it and providing answers and solutions to the crisis.

We'll also address questions about the oppositional forces to feminist engagements.

Business luncheons

Sponsored by the journal Politics, Groups and Identities (Taylor & Francis), luncheons take place Friday 12 June, 13:00 – 14:00. Brainstorm common interests and plan collaborative projects...

Introducing Feminist and Institutional Perspectives

Gamla torget, Room 475

Interested in feminist institutionalism (FI)? Or just curious to know more about this approach – which combines insights from feminist analysis and institutionalist theory – to explain the dynamics of gendered power inequalities in public and political life?

FIIN (the Feminism and Institutionalism International Network) invites expressions of interest from FIIN members and from the wider gender and politics community – particularly early-career researchers.

Aims of the session are to:

- allow FIIN members to take stock, brainstorm, and refine ideas for future joint projects
- reach out to the wider gender and politics community to introduce FI, and explore common interests
- plan the 10th anniversary of FIIN in 2016/17
- introduce a new Rowman & Littlefield International book series, Feminist and Institutional Perspectives, (co-edited by Fiona Mackay, Elin Bjarnegård and Meryl Kenny) and to identify potential contributors / projects.

Post-Structural Theorising, Feminist Analysis and Critical Policy Studies: Conversations and Collaborations

Gamla torget, Room 476

Are you pursuing research that draws on post-structural theory and feminist analysis, or are you considering it as a possibility?

Critical policy studies is being enriched by work that mobilises tools offered by post-structural theorising such as governmentality, biopolitics, assemblage and problematisation.

Post-structural approaches to research share with feminist analysis a broad understanding of politics and power as complex, multifaceted and exercised within and across diverse sites. But they often refuse the social justice commitments that inform feminist scholarship and/or work with different understandings of political agency and resistive practices.

Although a growing body of research is located at the intersection of these two approaches, there are few places where interested scholars can connect. This luncheon will facilitate more fluid and sustained conversation than is usually possible during conference panels. Join us to share information about your research / writing projects and plans, and to discuss potential collaborations.

Hard Times for Editing Feminist Journals and Book Series?

Gamla torget, Room 477

Publishing a feminist journal has always been a challenge. In the beginning the aim was not only to create a new forum for all academic and politically active women who work in the field of gender studies and who have been underrepresented in other journals but also to give publicity to ideas beyond the malestream of political science.

These original motivations have been obviously successful regarding the present variety of journals dealing with gender aspects and/or providing feminist critique. But is everything fine? In the face of financial cuts, gender backlash and insecure academic careers, perhaps not.

This luncheon is for everybody interested in editorial work or who wants to get to know the people behind the journals. With editors from feminist journals of political science and gender studies we will discuss themes such as perspectives for developing editorial work, including Peer Review systems and Open Access. Other challenges include public debates on anti-feminism, and gender backlash.

The luncheon is organised by the German journal Femina Politica – Journal for Feminist Political Sciences see www.femina-politica.de

Impact of the Crisis on Social Rights, Public Policy and Citizenship

Gamla torget, Room Svedelius

This Session looks at the Spanish research project Economic Crisis and Future of the Welfare State: Social Rights and Impact on Public Policies, Public Services Citizenship (ARMELA + VULNERA) led by the Universities of Santiago de Compostela and Deusto. Gender perspective is a cornerstone of this project and the priority is to analyse the impact of the economic crisis on women (feminisation of social vulnerability and resilience) and equality policies.

The project is looking for partners – Universities and/or researchers – to design an international comparative project and to participate in two European calls: Reversing inequalities and promoting fairness and/or Understanding Europe – promoting the European public and cultural space.

The Spanish project and the two European calls (currently at draft stage) will be presented.

Organisers Alba Alonso, Arantxa Elizondo and Maria Silvestre

Measuring Women's Impact in Political Processes

Gamla torget, Datorsalen

As a generalisation, women tend to be underrepresented in politics. Many advocates for the increased participation of women suggest that they bring different perspectives to policy-making. But these arguments – whether from existentialist or socialisation perspectives – are contested.

This discussion problematises the impact of women's participation in political processes, focusing on methodological challenges in research. It will look at how different researchers assess the impact of women's participation, in formal and informal political spheres, and ask: Could there be better ways of doing this?

For anyone interested in assessment exercises, methodology or impact evaluation – qualitative, quantitative and mixed methodologies.

Organisers Rachel Irwin and Emma Bjertén-Günther

ECPG Gender and Politics Career Achievement Award

This year's prize goes to Mieke Verloo, Professor of Comparative Politics and Inequality Issues at Radboud University Nijmegen and she was Research Director for MAGEEQ (2003 – 2005) and QUING (2006 – 2011) projects there.

Breaking new ground

Mieke is a path-breaking thinker, challenging and advancing theory, methodologies, and empirical analyses. Her work on gender mainstreaming pointed at the mainstreaming potential for 'displacement and empowerment', while her reflections on intersectionality have challenged the EU's one-size-fits-all approach to addressing inequalities, and continue to inspire scholars and activists across the world.

In 2011 her keynote lecture for the ECPG in Budapest was titled Gender Equality Policies as Interventions in a Changing World. Her 2012 Joint Sessions workshop in Antwerp, with Amy Mazur, was Thinking Big about Gender Equality Policies.

Mieke's development of Critical Frame Analysis (see the books Multiple Meanings of Gender Equality Policies and The Discursive Politics of Gender Equality) has contributed hugely to the advancement of discursive methodologies, mobilising hundreds of researchers to employ CFA to make the meanings and norms of gender policies visible.

Influencing political life

Mieke has acted as consultant to many organisations that promote gender equality, and has trained politicians whose influence in the field is crucial. Her work in the Council of Europe and the EU has been influential in forming current views on gender mainstreaming and her ten-years-after evaluation (Social Politics) shows how much remains to be said on the subject.

Recent consultancy includes work for the Luxembourg government, the European Parliament and the European Commission. Mieke also worked for the European Training Foundation, EIGE, The European Institution for Gender Equality, and for UN-Women.

Paving the way for future generations

Mieke has opened many opportunities for young researchers, as Scientific Director of EU-funded projects FP5 and FP6 on gender equality policies: Mainstreaming Gender Equality Policies in Europe www.mageeq.net and Quality in Gender Equality Policies www.quing.eu

Her qualities for leading research teams, with enthusiasm and wisdom, and her capacity to maintain 'nice and smart' researchers (her key criterion for being in the team!), are admirable.

Mieke has been a truly empowering research director, encouraging younger researchers to take on ambitious and innovative projects in which – besides reaching important conclusions – they can increase their self-confidence to become known researchers in their chosen field.

Mieke Verloo has worked previously for a research institute at Tilburg University, for the SCP as a freelance researcher, for several departments at Radboud University Nijmegen, and at the University of Utrecht. She was Visiting lecturer at the University of Hamburg-Harburg and Maria Jahoda Visiting Professor at Ruhr University Bochum. At the IWM (Institute for Human Sciences) in Vienna, she is Permanent Non-Residential Fellow,

ECPR Gender and Politics PhD Prize

The ECPG is delighted to award the 2015 prize to Ana Miškovska Kajevska, for her dissertation Taking a stand in times of violent societal changes: Belgrade and Zagreb feminists' positionings on the (post-)Yugoslav wars and each other (1991 – 2000)

Ana Miškovska Kajevska is a freelance researcher, translator and activist. She holds a Social Sciences PhD and an MSc cum laude in Sociology and Gender Studies from the University of Amsterdam. She has finished programmes in Women's Studies and Peace Studies at the Zagreb-based Centre for Women's Studies and Centre for Peace Studies, and has an extensive activist experience in, inter alia, human rights and environmental protection.

In addition to her interest in the (post-)Yugoslav wars and sustainable postwar recovery and reconciliation, Ana is committed to the critical examination of established (scholarly) classifications and ideas, especially those regarding gender and sexuality.

In her own words...

'My dissertation explores positionings (discourses and activities) of the Belgrade and Zagreb feminists vis-à-vis the (post-)Yugoslav wars and one another between 1991 and 2000.

Primarily applying a Bourdieucian framework and based on a comprehensive literature review, semi-structured qualitative interviews, and a thorough examination of organisational documents and printed media articles, this socio-historical analysis attends to a number of biases, lacunae and incorrect or insufficiently precise (recurring) information in the scholarship, thereby enriching existing knowledge on war-related feminist activism in Belgrade and Zagreb in the 1990s, and raising pressing epistemological questions about this knowledge.

In short, I challenge the common suggestion that the outbreak of the war violence in 1991 led to the same reorganisation of the Belgrade and Zagreb feminist fields: the activists in each city, who had worked together without tensions, divided into antinationalists and nationalists and began clashing because of their different war-related positionings.

I show that there were significant differences between Belgrade and Zagreb in the contents of those positionings and in the intra-feminist dynamics, due to which these two cities should not be considered interchangeable locations. Furthermore, I demonstrate that the designations 'antinationalist' and 'nationalist' were not completely value-free, objective descriptions. They were instead an essential part of the local and international efforts to stop the (sexual) war violence, and of the struggle for legitimacy among the feminists in each city – endeavours in which many Western (feminist) academics, activists, and funders were involved, too.'

Ana Miškovska Kajevska

Prize-giving ceremonies for both these awards take place on Thursday 11 June at 18:00 in the Aula Magna

*Deeds and Words: Gendering Politics after
Joni Lovenduski*

Rosie Campbell &
Sarah Childs (Eds)

What difference do feminist political scientists and politicians make to political institutions, policy processes and outcomes? Deeds and Words answers this question, covering gender and parties, elected institutions and the state; quotas and recruitment; public opinion, and women's interests. Vignettes by politicians including Dame Anne Begg, Baroness Gould and the Rt Hon Theresa May add first-hand insight. A fitting tribute to the pioneering political scientist Joni Lovenduski.

Gender, Conservatism and Political Representation

Karen Celis &
Sarah Childs (Eds)

Can Conservatives represent women? Descriptively, they do. Conservative women sit in many of the world's parliaments; women have led conservative parties; and there are, and have been, female conservative Prime Ministers. But do these women really stand for women, act for women and re-gender representation? Contributors to this collection address head-on the puzzle of right-wing women who engage in gendered political representation, but do so in a conservative setting.

*Gendering Politics,
Feminising Political Science*

Joni Lovenduski

Before the 1980s, women were written out of much of European political science, largely wilfully, on the grounds that they had no separate or different political life from men. Joni Lovenduski attempted to change the perception that women were political minors, providing evidence of their attitudes and participation, and rethinking the discipline to accommodate gender relations. This collection, which attempts to correct that bias, includes new essays that reflect on what has changed over the years.

*Why Aren't They
There? The Political Representation of Women, Ethnic Groups and Issue Positions in Legislatures*

Didier Ruedin

A groundbreaking cross-national examination of how the representation of women, ethnic groups, issue positions are interlinked. Didier Ruedin examines aspects unattainable in studies that focus on a single form of representation, resulting a comprehensive understanding of political representation, and important, policy-relevant insights for electoral engineering.

*Gender and the Vote in Britain:
Beyond the Gender Gap?*

Rosie Campbell

The 2005 British general election saw unprecedented media interest in parties' attempts to woo women voters, and there was much speculation about a fracturing relationship between women and Tony Blair. This analysis of British general elections 1992 – 2005 tests whether there were indeed gender differences in leadership evaluations, party of vote and political attitudes. Rosie Campbell examines interactions between sex, age, class, race, and education.

*Representing Women?
Female Legislators
in West European Parliaments*

Mercedes Mateo Diaz

What affects women's presence in parliaments?, Does the number of women in parliament have an effect? And are women in parliament representing women? This book examines political representation in EU parliaments. Contrary to critical mass theory, which claims that a few representatives cannot have an impact on the political outcomes, Mateo Diaz's research suggests that smaller groups can indeed influence legislative process.

Philip Ayoub (Drexel University), Andrea Krizsan (Central Europe University), Emanuela Lombardo (Universidad Complutense de Madrid), Sabine Lang (University of Washington), Joni Lovenduski (Birkbeck College, University of London), Amy Mazur (Washington State University), Joyce Outshoorn (University of Leiden), Mieke Verloo (Radboud Universiteit Nijmegen).

The comparative research conducted in the field of gender and politics today is more than ever resulting in innovative theory building, applying novel research designs and engaging with mainstream political science. Gender & Politics has moved from the margins of political science to the center. Given the highly critical and activist roots of the gender and politics scholarship, it quasi naturally embraces intersectionality. The Routledge Gender and Comparative Politics Book Series aims to reflect this rich, critical and broad scholarship covering the main political science sub-disciplines with, for instance, gender focused research on political economy, civil society, citizenship, political participation and representation, governance and policy making.

To reflect the diversity in the field, the Book Series welcomes book proposals such as:

1. Research monographs that capture outstanding scholar contributions
2. Reference handbooks and companions for the research community as well as tailored-made textbooks for undergraduates and graduates students
3. Edited volumes which gather the growing participation in research networks and research-focused activities
4. Research Methods contributions in Comparative Gender Politics that will attract faculty, scholars and students alike.
