Welcome from academic convenor Antoaneta Dimitrova

Dear friends
and colleagues

As current Convenor of the Standing Group on the European Union of the European Consortium for Political Science Research I would like to welcome you to the 9th Biennial Conference on the European Union.

This conference takes place at an eventful and interesting time for the European Union, involved in Brexit negotiations that are testing its physical and symbolic boundaries.

Scenarios for the future Union have been proposed in European Commission's 2017 White Paper on the future of Europe and the way forward. We have also recently witnessed new plans and initiatives from the President of France, Emmanuel Macron, attempting to mobilise heads of state and government to bring a new impetus to European integration. The latter development brings additional interest and symbolism to the fact that we have the pleasure of holding the SGEU conference in Paris.

It has been also an exciting time for the Standing Group, and not only because our object of scholarly interest is often in the news. Benefitting from the efforts of several Steering Committee members, a new constitution for the Group has been written, discussed and offered to members for approval. We invite members to come to the General Assembly Meeting from 13:00 –14:00 on Thursday in Room 11 on the first floor of 27SG, to discuss the constitution and further steps and hope to signal a new period of active involvement by members and a democratic opening for those wishing to join the Steering Committee and support our work.

Speaking of active involvement, professor Virginie Guiraudon and her team at Sciences Po have provided the most important ingredients for a successful conference: leadership, commitment, hard work and organisational support. On behalf of the Steering Committee and all members of the ECPR Standing Group on the EU, I would like to thank the entire organising committee for their efforts to make this conference a reality.

I would also like to express our appreciation for the work of the conference's Section Chairs for their input into the programme. In addition, we would like to thank the Journal of European Public Policy for sponsoring the public lecture during the conference.

As always, we appreciate the support and expertise of ECPR central services that provide continuity and answers to all our questions.

I look forward to three interesting, challenging and productive days in Paris and hope that the conference papers, roundtables and lectures will be even more attractive than the charms of this wonderful city.

ECPR Standing Group on the European Union

ECPR's Standing Group on the European Union (SGEU) promotes co-ordination and collaboration among political scientists interested in the blooming area of research on the EU. The Standing Group, one of the most populous in the ECPR, enjoys wide recognition.

Primarily a group of political scientists, the SGEU also fosters collaboration across social science disciplines, including anthropology, economics, law, sociology, and social psychology, with a substantive focus on the EU. SGEU's main activities cover:

a biennial pan-European conference; summer schools; organising and sponsoring Workshops, Panels and Sessions at ECPR events, and any major political science conference; maintenance of a mailing list, a news service and a website.

Euroscepticism and the Future of European Integration

This lecture by Catherine de Vries (University of Essex) is sponsored by the Journal of European Public Policy, and will be introduced by the journal's co-editor, Berthold Rittberger

The European Union is facing turbulent times. It is plagued by deep divisions over how to shape its future. Over half a century of integration has created a profound interconnectedness between the political, economic, and social fates of member states. At the same time, however, the fortunes of member states have started to diverge dramatically.

As a result, the political fault lines are widening. Today, they crosscut the continent from North to South on the economy and austerity, and from East to West on migration and human rights. What are the effects of these developments on public opinion? By presenting a wealth of empirical evidence, this lecture provides an overview of the contours of public opinion. Moreover, it discusses how it matters for behaviour in elections and how it shapes possible reform of the European Union in the future.

Catherine de Vries is a Professor of Politics in the Department of Government at the University of Essex where she also serves as the Director of the Essex Centre for Experimental Social Sciences, and a Professor and Chair of Political Behaviour at the Free University Amsterdam. She is also an associate member of Nuffield College at the University of Oxford. Over the years, she has published extensively on the most important societal and political problems facing Europe today, such as the ramifications of the Eurozone crisis, the success of extremist parties or political corruption. Her recent monograph Euroscepticism and the Future of European Integration with Oxford University Press provides a systematic account of public opinion towards Europe.

The Journal of European Public Policy (JEPP) was founded 25 years ago by Jeremy Richardson, and has become one of the most authoritative sources on scholarship on public policy, European politics and the European Union. It consistently ranks among the top political science journals (9/165, Journal Citation Report 2016; 6th, Google Scholar 2016).

The journal is currently co-edited by Jeremy Richardson and Berthold Rittberger.

European Parliament Office in France

As an extension for France of the European Parliament Directorate General for Communication, the mission our office is to raise awareness of the European Parliament (EP) and the EU generally, and to encourage citizens to vote in European parliamentary elections.

We provide visibility to MEPs' legislative work and we give citizens access to our institution through public events, bringing stakeholders and the public together with their MEPs, academics and think-tanks.

Our Press relations team organises press briefings and keeps the media informed of news stories in the European Parliament. Our colleagues dedicated to youth activities work closely with teachers, educationalists and bodies involved in active citizenship to produce and distribute free and neutral resources about the EP.

Our public relations team develops links with trade bodies, professionals, companies, NGOs and anyone else who has an interest in European affairs and the role of the EP.

Whither European Integration? Addressing EU Internal and External Challenges

Since Aesop's fable The Four Oxen and the Lion, the idea that there is strength in numbers has been considered common sense. This is also a leitmotif in many discourses on European integration, notably in idea that the European states need to 'speak with one voice' in global settings, that some issues, such as the environment, are best dealt through cross-state cooperation to avoid a 'tragedy of the commons', or that de jure 'unity in diversity' is a positive sum game.

EU scholars have long exposed a much more complex reality:

Legally – Differentiated political integration is a historical fact: à la carte Schengen, euro opt-outs, multi-speed Europe after enlargement. Socioeconomically, disparities among member states and their populations remain high despite common policy frameworks, and anti-EU parties exploit the notion that only some Europeans benefit from integration processes.

Diplomatically – Member states sometimes sing different tunes just as in the Eurovision contest. We have observed it in 2018 with the debate on the GAFAM and proposals to tax the US IT giants. Concomitantly, there has been resistance from EU subnational and/or civil society actors to EU agreements with third states with the CETA or with Turkey regarding migration. The question is thus how to best address external challenges given tensions and contradictions within the EU.

This Roundtable brings together speakers whose careers reflect an enduring commitment to the comprehension of European integration and a willingness to contribute to EU policy developments. Their experience within and outside of academia and European institutions and think-tanks helps us analyse the key challenges facing the EU and European societies. Based on our speakers' diagnostic of the situation, we will be able to assess what is desirable and feasible.

Renaud Dehousse is President of the European University Institute in Florence where he had previously obtained his PhD and taught. Prior to this, he held the Jean Monnet Chair of European Law and Political Science at Sciences Po, where he directed the Centre for European Studies. Renaud was the scientific advisor to Notre Europe, the think-tank founded by Jacques Delors. He participated in several working parties on the reform of European institutions established by the European Commission and the French government, notably the working group that led to the Laeken declaration.

Heather Grabbe is director of the Open Society European Policy Institute, and its director of EU affairs. From 2004 to 2009 she was senior advisor to the then European Commissioner for Enlargement Olli Rehn, responsible in his cabinet for the Balkans and Turkey. Before joining the commission, Heather was deputy director of the Centre for European Reform in London. She holds a PhD from the University of Birmingham.

Enrico Letta is Dean of the Paris School of International Affairs at Sciences Po and founder of the Scuola di Politiche. He was Prime Minister of Italy from April 2013 to February 2014. Between 2001 and 2015 he was a Member of the Italian Parliament or of the European Parliament. He has held several ministerial positions since 1998, including Minister for EU Affairs, Minister for Industry, Commerce and Crafts and Foreign Trade. Enrico Letta obtained a PhD in European Union Law at Sant'Anna School for Advanced Studies in Pisa.

Europe in Political Turmoil: Explaining Party Politics and Electoral Dynamics in European Welfare Democracies

Europe's political landscapes are in turmoil, and new radical parties challenge the established political order. The process of European integration is more and more contested politically.

This Roundtable, based on the recently published Oxford University Press volume Welfare Democracies & Party Politics, locates Europe's contemporary challenges within the longer economic and political trajectories of its 'welfare democracies'. Based on analysis of structures of political competition and voter-party links in different European democracies, it presents a general understanding of the political and economic turmoil of recent decades. It also provides an analytical framework that links welfare states to party systems, combining recent contributions to the comparative political economy of the welfare state and insights from party and electoral politics.

The Roundtable describes three phenomena:

First, concerning electoral politics, it identifies a certain homogenisation of European party systems, the emergence of a new combination of leftist socio-economic and rightist socio-cultural positions in many parties, and the different electoral success of the radical right in the north of Europe and of the radical left in the south. Second, it underlines a confluence toward renewed welfare state support among parties and voters. Third, it shows how the Europeanisation of political dynamics, combined with incompatible growth models, has created pronounced European cleavages.

Philip Manow is Professor for Comparative Political Economy at the University of Bremen. He held positions at the University of Konstanz and Heidelberg and was senior researcher at the Max-Planck Institute for the Study of Societies. He is currently a fellow at the Institute for Advanced Studies of the University of Konstanz. His research focuses on comparative political economy, the German political system, and political theory.

Hanna Schwander is Professor of Public Policy at the Hertie School.

Her research focuses on how post-industrial transformations of welfare states, labour markets and societies affect various aspects of political life. She obtained her PhD in 2012 from the University of Zurich and that year joined the Research Center on Inequality and Social Policy (SOCIUM) at the University of Bremen. She has also worked at EUI in Florence, and at the Universities of Oxford, Essen-Duisburg and Zurich, where she led an Ambizione project on women's political alignment.

Bruno Palier is CNRS Research Director, Sciences Po Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics and co-director of Laboratory for Interdisciplinary Evaluation of Public Policies. He has published numerous articles and books, on welfare state transformation as well as on European social policies. Trained in social science, he has a PhD in political science and was the scientific coordinator of a European Network of excellence, Reconciling Work and Welfare. He is also a Member of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics Executive Council. His research focuses on welfare reforms in Europe.

Brexit: Where Are We, and Where Are We Headed?

This Roundtable will consider the state of the Brexit process in terms of negotiations between the UK and the EU and within the UK itself. Panellists will speculate how this process might unfold, and with what consequences.

Catherine Barnard, Senior Fellow of The UK in a Changing Europe, is Professor of European Union Law and Jean Monnet Chair of EU Law in the Faculty of Law at the University of Cambridge. Her research interests include European Union law, labour and discrimination law, and competition law.

Anand Menon, Director of The UK in a Changing Europe, is Professor of European Politics and Foreign Affairs, Kings College London. His research focuses on international organisations, theories of European integration, British and French politics and foreign policies, EU institutions, and EU foreign and security policies.

Tom Nuttall, Charlemagne columnist for The Economist, covers European politics and economics. Before that he worked as US west coast correspondent in Los Angeles for two years, and as an editor on the Europe desk. Before joining The Economist, Tom worked as an editor at the think-tank, European Council on Foreign Relations, and spent several years as a senior editor at Prospect magazine.

Ivan Rogers KCMG, is the Former Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom to the European Union (2013–2017).

LIEPP: Sciences Po Laboratory for the Interdisciplinary Evaluation of Public Policies

LIEPP is a laboratory created in 2011 with financial support from the French National Research Agency (ANR) for the interdisciplinary study and evaluation of public policies. The project strives to combine the highest standards of excellence in research from specific disciplines and from LIEPP's founding centres with a systematic implementation of an interdisciplinary approach to public policy evaluation. LIEPP facilitates the cross-fertilisation of approaches from different disciplines on the same policy issue by providing researchers, visiting scholars, policy-makers and other stakeholders a platform for collaboration.

LIEPP brings together more than 100 Sciences Po researchers from various disciplines. The laboratory is organised around the common issue of public policy evaluation, which transcends disciplinary boundaries, fostering dialogue between economists, sociologists and political scientists – sometimes also engaging lawyers and historians. This interdisciplinary perspective is reinforced by a network of thematic research groups coordinating several projects around major public policy issues: Evaluation of Democracy, Educational Policies, Socio-fiscal Policies, and Discriminations & Social Inequalities. Each research group is co-directed by researchers from different disciplinary backgrounds and encompasses several projects on the same topic to ensure a multidisciplinary approach to the evaluation of a policy, combining qualitative, quantitative and comparative assessments. LIEPP supports many other projects dealing with single issues such as research excellence policies, health policies, urban policies, penal policies, and projects on open source data analysis.

Engaged on expanding national and international reach, LIEPP mobilises a network of 80 external researchers from 50 different institutions of which 40 per cent are abroad, and develops numerous partnerships with public policy institutions in France and abroad. Pursuing fundamental research, it aims at positioning France as an international leader in evaluation research. LIEPP also aims at informing public debate by disseminating the results of its research.

LIEPP's work nurtures international exchange on problems linked to evaluation through its international visiting scholars programme and engagement in international activities. Researchers participate in international conferences, and since LIEPP's founding, 212 scientific events have been organised. Thanks to its Visiting Scholars Programme, LIEPP has already received 51 visiting professors, who have benefited from interdisciplinary discussions with LIEPP affiliates and have contributed to LIEPP's publications series and research projects.

LIEPP also provides training on methods for the evaluation of public policy through teaching, lectures and professional training as well as by supporting the work of PhD candidates. Each year LIEPP awards funding for doctoral thesis research and provides students with rich interdisciplinary academic support.

LIEPP has its own publication series: Working papers, Methodological discussion papers (for interdisciplinary dialogue), and Policy Briefs (quick account of the research done on a given topic for experts and institutional stakeholders).

These series foster exchange and peer review before publication in academic journals and a large number of publications linked to LIEPP's topics and activities have been produced by LIEPP research affiliates over a short time span.

LIEPP is part of the programme Investissements d'Avenir (Labex ANR-0091, ANR-11-IDEX-0005-02).

Sciences Po Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics

Sciences Po is an institution of higher education and research in the humanities and social sciences. Its work in law, economics, history, political science and sociology is pursued through eleven research units and several crosscutting programmes.

Sciences Po's research community includes over 220 members and 350 PhD candidates. Recognised internationally, these members' work covers a wide range of topics including education, democracies, urban development, globalisation and public health.

One of Sciences Po's key objectives is to make a significant contribution to methodological, epistemological and theoretical advances in the humanities and social sciences. Its mission is also to share the results of its research with the international research community, students, and more broadly, society as a whole.

Over the past five years, the QS World University Rankings have confirmed Sciences Po's place amongst leading universities in the social sciences. Sciences Po is 4th in the world in Politics and International Relations, and 37th in Sociology.

At national level, Sciences Po affirms its position:

1st in Political Science & International Relations and Sociology

2nd in Law and History

3rd in Economics.

Founded in 2009 and headed by Florence Haegel since September 2016, Sciences Po's Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics (UMR 8239) is a multidisciplinary and comparative research unit within the department of political science and sociology.

It aims to develop research programs on the impact of European economic and sociological changes on politics and policies, including a special focus on the process of European integration. It also compares these transformations with those occurring in other parts of the world.

Its key research domains are grouped around four main overlapping research axes:

- the transformations of capitalism
- the state as a producer of public policies
- cities, borders and (im)mobilities
- tensions in representative democracy.

CEE is now home to more than 25 senior researchers (FNRS, CNRS, university professors), some 50 PhD candidates and recent PhD recipients and more than 30 research associates, from France and abroad. CEE also regularly hosts well-known guest researchers, postdocs and PhD candidates for periods ranging from one month to one year.

Openness to the international scientific community is one of CEE's key qualities. Most of its research projects include an international and/or comparative dimension and their results are often published in international journals or translated into foreign languages. CEE's researchers belong to networks that include multinational teams. CEE also maintains longstanding partnerships with research institutions abroad.

CEE's research activity includes the organisation of scientific events and it is the springboard for numerous publications. CEE publishes a series of online working papers: Cahiers européens de Sciences Po.

Support of young researchers is a key CEE objective and its researchers are strongly involved in Sciences Po's teaching programs at all levels including PSIA – School of International Affairs, Urban School and School of Public Affairs.
